Amr Soliman is an Egyptian architect and businessman; the founder of DMG some 27 years ago. He has reflected his vision of life and approach to business in DMG – an abbreviation for Dar Al Mimar Group, where the name reflects the warmth of home: “Dar”, the power of the “Group” and the enthusiasm to develop and build landmarks through “Mimar” / Architecture.

Amr has originally started DMG as an architectural design house; a venue to deliver superior designs that aimed to add real value to the lives of his clients. Later on, he extended his business to contracting in order to have the chance to transfer the value and the spirit of the designs his company produced into successful real life houses and buildings. In a continuous aspiration for excellence, he kept expanding the business and completing the value chain: from design to contracting to landscape to fine finishing to facilities management, all the way to a complete, professional, integrated engineering group in 2005. Throughout this journey, he has coupled practical experience with specialized diplomas in business and real estate.

With the engineering foundation built and well established, Amr moved to the next step of his vision, introducing Mountain View as a professional real estate development company in 2005. Capitalizing on the powerful engineering arm and an innovative approach to real estate, Mountain View quickly evolved from developing small premium communities and mini-compounds, all the way to city-scale developments that integrate different life activities from residence to recreation, shopping, business and working environments.

Together with members of the DMG family, Amr spent the years from 2010 to 2015 consolidating the group companies with the latest in business and management systems, manning all the key strategic posts with the best calibers in the market, transforming the group into a leading conglomerate that blends a unique local flavor with both multinational experience and leading edge systems.

With the group companies strongly established and professionally led by members of the DMG family, Amr is moving gradually from management and its chores, directing his full attention to innovation and development, concentrating on developing superiorly designed communities for a happier life. His vision of happiness builds on a practical approach that evolves from the DMG family, to DMG clients, then the whole community.

In addition to leading development and innovation, and catalyzing business across different DMG companies, Amr Soliman spends considerable parts of his time on social and humanitarian activities as an active and founding partner of a number of charities and social responsibility institutions, including “The Egyptian Food Bank,” and “Terous.” He has participated in founding the AUC Real Estate Academy Program and is one of the referees of its graduation project.

Amr Soliman is living in Cairo with his wife and 4 sons at different stages of education.
